Historical Note

Mrs. Ruth Pritchard of Amo, Indiana, researched the history of the early schools of Hendricks County, Indiana. Regarded as an authority on such matters, she contributed a history of the first known public school of Salem, Indiana, to The Farm News of Hendricks County, just one of the many historical studies she had conducted.

Scope and Contents

This collection includes twelve newspaper and photocopied clippings in the collection, dating from 1957-1966 from various Hendricks County newspapers. Six of the clippings concern school personnel and the history of schools in the county. Three clippings profile local personalities. One focuses on the subject of a dangerous bridge in the county. Another spotlights the centennial celebration in Amo, Indiana; and one explains how a caved-in roof from heavy snow brought about the building of the present courthouse in Danville, county seat of Hendricks County.

Arrangement

This collection is arranged chronologically.
